Enjoying some homemade scrapple a friend gave me. @boyzoid, you would like this version. No organ meat (just pork shoulder).

Someone put me out of my misery. I'm sunburned, covered in blisters and in pain. It hurts to just sit still.

Friends for Aaron

Some of you may know, but a friend and leader in our programming community has suffered a great loss. Aaron West's home is currently underwater in the Nashville floods. He and his family had about an hour to pack as much as they could before they needed to evacuate.

He recently saw some overhead shots of his neighborhood (above) and confirmed that his house is flooded -- and he is without flood insurance because his property was not on a flood plain. I've set this site up as a way we can try to help him out during this trying time.

All donations will go to Aaron and his family. Thank you for your help!

Dale Rinehart Donations

Donate

Thanks for taking the time to visit this donation page for Joe Rinehart's wife, Dale.

First, some background:

Shortly after Christmas 2008, Dale Rinehart was diagnosed with Multiple Sclerosis \(MS\). Full details on how this happened can be found Joe's blog. However, we really don't want to rehash what's already happened, but rather want to look forward.

MS treatments (physician visits, medications, etc) can be very expensive. Even with adequate health coverage, there is still a significant ongoing out-of-pocket expense. Dale and Joe are no exception. Those who are fortunate enough to know them know that they are both very generous, caring, selfless people. They have both touched a lot of lives, whether it be personally or professionally (or both). If this were anyone else, Dale and Joe would be leading the charge to do something... anything to help. We know there are people out there that want to do the same for them.

We want to be clear up front that none of this is Joe's idea. Those who know him know that he is a very self-reliant person and the last thing he would do is ask for charity. This endeavor is being taken up by friends and colleagues who want to help.

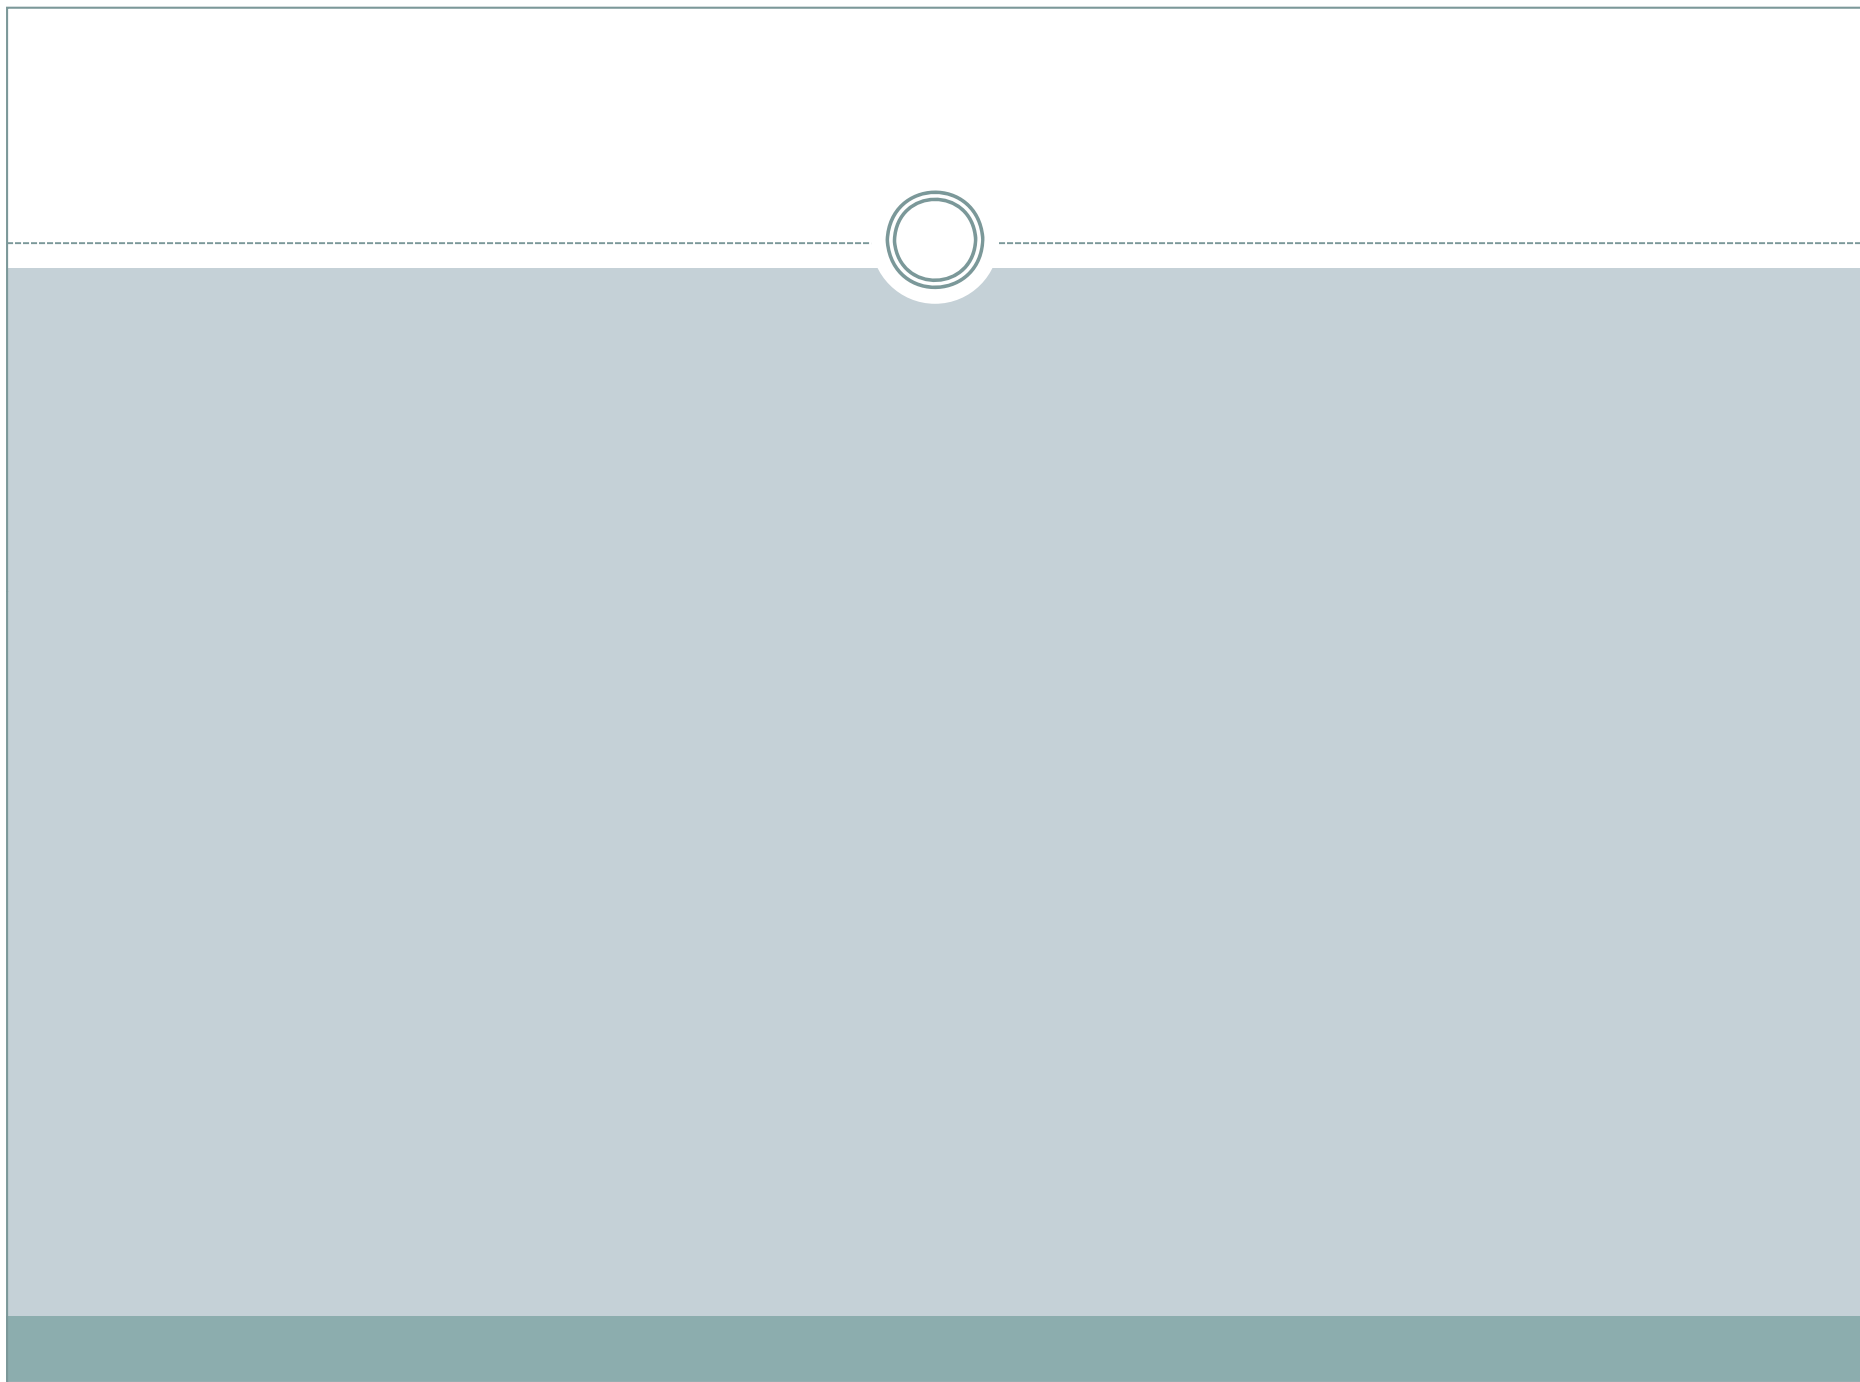

Joe's presentations on development and his work on the Model-Glue framework have helped a huge number of people create great applications and become better programmers. He's spent countless hours corresponding, speaking, and coding in support of the community. So if you know Joe or Dale, or are one of the people who have benefited from his efforts, please consider giving something back in the form of a donation.

All proceeds will be given directly to Joe to help offset the ongoing and indefinite medical costs associated with his wife's illness. There's no doubt that any money raised will be a big help to him and be accepted with gratitude. But we feel that it carries an additional and even more compelling benefit: letting him know that so many other people appreciate what he's done and are behind him now.

Thanks.
